

Feeling Charitable? 16 Drink Gifts That Actually Give Back

BY LAURA DENBY

There are many decisions that go into selecting the perfect bottle of wine, rum or whiskey—among them, price, taste and quality. But in addition to these factors, have you ever stopped to think if your purchase could benefit society, too? As it turns out, there are a ton of drink companies that donate their proceeds to charitable causes. Buying from them is a great way to enjoy a tasty beverage while do a good deed at the same time.

It's not just lip service, either. —From wildfire relief to supporting our nation's first responders, brands that give a portion of proceeds are making a difference in communities nationwide. If you're looking for the perfect bottle to bring to a holiday party, consider grabbing one that has a charitable component. That way, you'll not only be assured of snagging a high-quality drink—you'll be supporting an important cause at the same time.

The Best Drinks That Give Back

Baldacci Family Vineyards

Every year, the Baldacci family pledges to donate $10 for every active wine club member to a local Napa County nonprofit. This year, the winery has selected the Puertas Abiertas Community Resource Center, which provides, health, social, and educational services to the local Latino community.

The brand currently counts 1,200 active wine club members, which means the donation for 2022 is on track to be $12,000. This charitable tradition grows every year as the wine club grows, with the Baldacci family's contribution going toward Puertas Abiertas' initiatives that help improve financial ability, civic involvement and educational success within the community.
